Duty of Candour Report 2022/2023

All health and social care services in Scotland have a duty of candour. This is a legal requirement which means that when things go wrong and mistakes happen, the people affected understand what has happened, receive an apology, and that organisations learn how to improve for the future.

An important part of this duty is that we provide an annual report about the duty of candour in our services. This short report describes how our care service has operated the duty of candour during the time between 1 April 2022 and 31 March 2023. We hope you find this report useful.

1. How many incidents happened to which the duty of candour applies?

In the last year, there have been no incidents to which the duty of candour applied.

2. Information about our policies and procedures

Where something has happened that triggers the duty of candour, our staff report this to the practice manager who has responsibility for ensuring that the duty of candour procedure is followed. The manager records the incident and reports as necessary to the local health board.

When an incident has happened, the manager and staff set up a learning review with senior colleagues. This allows everyone involved to review what happened and identify changes for the future.

All new staff learn about the duty of candour at their induction.

We know that serious mistakes can be distressing for staff as well as people who use our services and their families. We have occupational welfare support in place for our staff if they have been affected by a duty of candour incident.

Where patients are affected by the duty of candour, we can make arrangements to access support as necessary.
